

Frontend inspirations

- 1.) Cookpad – My appreciation for this site involves its functional and user friendly focus. As a user, navigating various options are comprehensive and interactive. I do feel that the design of the welcome page takes a backseat in order to prioritize user experience. Users are able to create, save, and share recipes on the site. The layout of each recipe page is also very user focused and easy to follow.

- 2.) Hungry Root – This site offers a ton of options and is displays a responsive layout which provides the user with easy to read instructions on how to customize their choices. The site offers testimonials, nutritional options based on diet, and is easy to navigate.

- 3.) TastingTable – This site immediately presents a smooth design to the user’s experience as well as offers other services like the latest trends in restaurant and cocktail culture. There’s an element of culture that coincides with each respective recipe and I feel that this site captures that really effectively.
